A few years ago my Mother passed away. Already in my mid thirties I handled it as well as can be expected, but there's always that little tingle when someone complains about an overbearing Mom. There's always that hesitation as Mother's Day approaches and you see the signs and reminders everywhere. While processing her passing I found comfort in the fraternity of friends who had also lost a parent. It was a terrible club to be in, but at least we had people to talk to who understood what we were going through, intimately.

When we first heard the news of Shannon's passing, we all personalized it. He was my friend. He was a mentor to many. He was a devil's advocate and an innovator. But he was also a nine year old girl's dad. When we started planning what's since become the Stay Calm event here in Philadelphia, it was all about the Philly area BME crew- we call ourselves the Weirdos- getting together, sharing stories and a few raised glasses and the desire to pay our respects to the man who helped bring us all together.

As the days passed we noticed that the event RSVP was growing with attending notifications. People were buying plane tickets, bus tickets, arranging car pools and rideshares. Before long we had broken 100. Not long after that 150. As I write this its broken 200 attending guests.

The planned night at the bar became a full day affair, now including a Sunday brunch and a variety of side-lined stuff like private suspension, hotel parties and more. But I never lost sight of Ari; Shannon and Rachel's daughter, who would be turning ten years old a few days before the Memorial. I contacted the other members of the SC planning crew and asked what they thought about us doing a fundraiser where 100% of the collected funds went directly to Ari. They agreed it would be a great idea and I reached out to you folks on facebook, by text and email.

The responses floored us. "What can we do". "Anything you need". Soon we had amassed jewelry, gift cards, website memberships, original art, and more. We even wanted to raffle off a date with me (ok. I wanted to raffle off a date with me) but we all knew that it would be Jimmy Buddha outbidding everyone just to be near me and scrapped it instantly. That's just too much man for the world to handle.

We reached out to Johnny Thief- who's not only a well known tattooer (Shannon interviewed him a few years back) but also a legendary rock poster artist, family friend and IAM community member, about designing an exclusive screen printed poster design to sell at the event, again with 100% of the profit going to Ari. Steve LaBelle, another IAM community member and friend, agreed to design a tshirt with the same goal in mind. The Bike Stop- the bar I manage that's owned by two IAM members (and my family) donated not only the space but tons of items that will make the raffle go more smoothly.

In the end, I'm sitting here in my office less than a week away from the memorial and I couldn't be more pleased by the outpouring of love and support. I hate that Ari is now part of that all too grown up club of children who've lost a parent, but with your love and your support we're going to give her a hell of a birthday present.

We're calling you folks 'Sponsors' for want of a better word, but to me, you're friends. People who didn't flinch when someone came calling for help and who's generosity means more to me than my words can possibly express.

I'll be seeing a lot of you in Vegas for the APP Conference where it's fallen on me to eulogize Shannon; knowing that you guys are there will certainly make it easier. Thank you all, so much.

With Love,
Shawn Porter
